

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

Sleet and snow showers will eventually become confined to areas exposed to the westerly winds overnight, but following the showers of Friday, ice will then be the main hazard, particularly on untreated surfaces. The snow showers may give an additional 1-3 cm of snow in places.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 00:05 on Sat, 20th Jan 2018 until 11:00 on Sat, 20th Jan 2018

Ice is likely to form through Friday night and last into Saturday morning with some sleet and snow showers continuing in places.

There will probably be ice on some untreated roads, pavements and cycle paths, potentially resulting in some injuries from slips and falls.
